I, SPY ANNA MAXWELL MARTIN JOINS MI5

The Guardian

'You have to really remember how lucky you are'
Anna Maxwell Martin

As she prepares to play an MI5 interrogator in a thrilling new cold war drama, Anna Maxwell Martin talks to Emine Saner about looking like a child, coping with a family death – and her plan to crack Hollywood at last

'I thought I was going to be the next Kate Winslet'

The only thing Anna Maxwell Martin did not enjoy about her role in a new cold war spy drama was the tights. Luckily, her character Lily Taylor, an MI5 debriefer, spends a lot of time behind a desk. "Every scene where you see a table, the tights are off, they're round the ankles," says Maxwell Martin. "Damian's like ... " She mimics Damian Lewis, playing MI6 officer Nicholas Elliott, rolling his eyes. "They were so itchy!" Who knows if the maddening woollens were deliberate, but they must have enhanced the uncomfortable atmosphere of her claustrophobic interrogations.

In A Spy Among Friends, based on the book by Ben Macintyre, Taylor is trying to get to the truth of what happened in Beirut where, under Elliott's watch, the British double agent Kim Philby (played by Guy Pearce) escaped to Moscow. It's enthralling and classy, and Maxwell Martin is rightly proud of it. "It's not an easy watch. You have to concentrate. It's not like watching Married at First Sight." A laugh and a hammy aside: "My regular viewing."

Her character is the only made-up one – a northern woman, from a lower social class, and pin-sharp. "She's a representation of the antithesis of that world, that old boys' club and someone who has not been handed everything – and, by the same token, nothing is expected of her. It's a network isn't it? You got a job based on the people you knew." Taylor, she says, is "cynical about that network, as you would be – as we feel like that now." At one point, Taylor complains about these elite men, operating in secret, not wanting to be scrutinised by the "peasants" – which just as accurately describes modern politics. "It's ghastly," says Maxwell Martin. "So much of the behaviour now is awful. It is so brutal. They are a brutalising force."

There is nothing of DCS Patricia Carmichael – the withering anti-corruption investigator Maxwell Martin played in Line of Duty – about Taylor. "Patricia Carmichael is all about artifice. That maybe was deliberate on [writer] Jed Mercurio's part, and certainly a choice on mine, that you did not have a clue who that woman was. Lily is not like that at all. In a world where there's so much hidden agenda, Lily doesn't have one. She's just doing her job."

We meet in an absurdly fancy London hotel suite. "I've never been anywhere like this in my life," says Maxwell Martin, bright blue eyes wide, who is weighing up whether to pinch the miniatures from the cocktail trolley. She is an absolute hoot, with a great cackle and a slight maniacal air – the same bristling energy she gives to her hilariously awful and frazzled Julia in the sitcom Motherland but, unlike Julia, it's joyful. It also serves as a handy way of deflecting anything too emotional; Maxwell Martin does not do earnest. She's wearing a tangle of heavy gold chains round her neck, gold shoes and trousers with tassles all over them – she's come dressed as Aladdin, she jokes – and it works.

She turns in brilliant and versatile performances – she won Baftas for the BBC's Bleak House and Channel 4's Poppy Shakespeare, has had acclaimed theatre roles, and on TV done sci-fi, comedy and drama – but all without fuss or actor's angst, to the point where she laughs at how unprepared she usually is. It never matters – as Sharon Horgan, Motherland's co-creator, has said, she is "so naturally gifted she can just switch it on and off". On A Spy Among Friends, she recalls being asked her character's surname. "I went: 'She doesn't have a surname.'" She mimics the show's writer Alexander Cary, exasperated: "'Of course she has a fucking surname.' I'd been playing the part for four months and I didn't even know!" A smile. "You could argue, why do you need to know?"

This drama is one of only a couple of projects Maxwell Martin has taken on in the last year. "I've just had a massive amount of time off with the girls, since Roger. I haven't taken anything because it's not ... " She pauses. "It doesn't mean enough to me to leave the girls." In September 2021, the director Roger Michell, her former husband and father of their two daughters, died suddenly. She and Michell were separated, seemingly amicably - Maxwell Martin, who has a new partner, was in Michell's last film, The Duke, and they were developing something else at the time of his death. "We didn't have grudges," she says. "I don't operate like that, Roger didn't really operate like that. It's very sad if you separate, it's devastating, and you hope you'll come back around, after a period of time, where you'll be ... When Roger died, I lost one of my best friends. I see it as that."

Over the last year, she and her children, who are 11 and 13, "navigate a really unknown world and often patience is your only friend, and it's hard. I'm very lucky, I have masses of support, amazing friends and my family. You just have to go through the process. What else is there to do?" What has helped? A shadow of mischief passes her face and she says: "Drinking, smoking and taking drugs." A laugh, then: "I never get offered drugs. There's something about my face. I think people think I'm a child."

She becomes more thoughtful. "What helps? Nothing really. Human interaction. You can see me and my kids laugh a lot, we're not miseries. We process everything, and we feel miserable, but we really like having a good time, so we do have a right laugh at home. We cry, we laugh, we cry. That helps."

Maxwell Martin's father, Ivan, died when she was in her 20s. It has been strange, because people have said to her she's been through grief before, that she knows what to do. But it's different - not least because she's also trying to help her daughters through it. "I don't think you do know what to do. That's maybe what's really frightening isn't it? Things happen to all of us, universally, and it's about how you get through those things in a ... I don't want to use word 'positive'. In a way where you come out the other side and you're not a dickhead." At best, you come out of it "having empathy, being good fun, working hard, making good relationships. You have to just get through it as best you can." A comedy pause and a straight face: "With the drink, the drugs ... "

Maxwell Martin grew up in Beverley, east Yorkshire, where her mother was a research scientist and her father ran a pharmaceuticals company. She, though, loved the arts and got into singing first, then after-school drama classes. She studied history at Liverpool University, then went to the London drama school Lamda. Did she have a plan for her career? "Yes I did, and it's not worked out. I thought I was going to be the next Kate Winslet, and I'm not." I can't tell if she's being serious, but she claims she is. The romantic lead? The Hollywood career? "Yeah." She lacked "chutzpah", she says. "Even though I had drive and ambition, I was really chronically shy, socially awkward, so that whole thing was quite daunting."

The industry has changed, particularly for women, since she was in her 20s. She'll try to break Hollywood now, she says. "Now I feel like, oh yeah, I can be really me now, because no one's going to say I'm not thin enough or not pretty enough, because we just don't say that stuff any more. Well, I hope we don't. Maybe pretty young ingenues are still followed around and asked not to eat burgers. I hope that doesn't happen. It happened to lots of women of my generation." To her? "I had the opposite. On Bleak House, I got so chubby I couldn't get into any of my dresses. Roger was such a feeder, I ballooned!"

In her 20s, Maxwell Martin came close to getting a Coen brothers film. "Then my personal life took over, I had a lot of responsibilities here. Maybe I used that as an excuse. I definitely wanted a family, I wouldn't have sacrificed that, but maybe I didn't have to ... I don't know. I just didn't do it. But as I say, I'm going to do it soon."

She wants to get back to TV and film sets, which she has missed, and write her own work. "I never thought I'd be able to do that. Roger would say: 'You should write something.' Then you just start doing it and you realise it's semi-OK and people don't have too horrific a response to it. It's all confidence that comes with age, doesn't it?" She has changed a huge amount, she says. "I'm quite happy in myself. That's not to negate anything that's happened in the last couple of years, but you have to really remember how lucky you are if you're ... " She looks down, amused at herself. "It's hardly a hardship, sat in a hotel room in an Aladdin outfit."

A Spy Among Friends is on ITVX on 8 December.

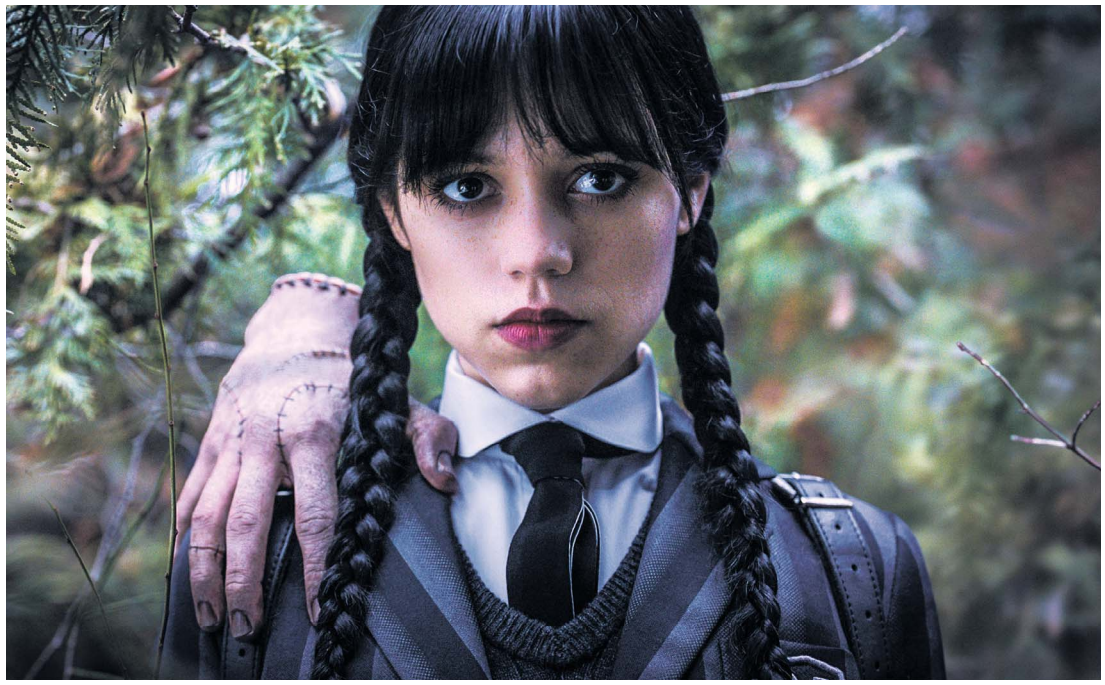
Grisly fun, perfect casting and Tim Burton – this Addams Family revamp is a scream

Joel Golby



Done right, The Addams Family has the potential to be one of the most pure-fun franchises that Hollywood has. It's a joyously macabre antidote to the white-picket-fence American dream, with a good old-fashioned gothic tradition and all the best bits of modern Halloween - severed limbs as a joke, big spiders, being very horny in a slightly weird way - thrown in.

In the 90s, the films The Addams Family and Addams Family Values took Charles Addams's source material and played it along perfectly spooky lines, with Anjelica Huston and Christopher Lloyd vamping it up to the maximum and Christina Ricci playing a wonderfully psychotic little Wednesday. The question is, do you trust Netflix - the people who made both Tall Girl and Tall Girl 2, may I remind you - to carry on that fine tradition?

Well, they've smashed it. The first perfect choice is the format - Wednesday (from Wednesday, Netflix) casts Jenna Ortega, an Aubrey Plaza re-gen who is primed for stardom, as the titular Addams child, sending her to spooky boarding school Nevermore Academy after an incident involving piranhas, a swimming pool full of jocks and a lost testicle. There are sirens and lycans and vampires, but not in a Twilight way, and Wednesday is considered the weirdest weirdo at a school where a lot of the students legitimately feast on blood. What made Addams Family Values so funny almost 30 (What!) years ago was the contrast of the idiosyncratic vaudeville goth family (with an undead chauffeur and a pet severed hand) with cul-de-sac-and-prom-queen America. Here, they've tweaked the formula in a satisfying way: Wednesday's sparklingly colourful roommate, Enid, could so easily have been written as a cheerful airhead who doesn't "get" her new companion. Instead, she's more than equipped to deal with her goth posturing while having a story of her own.

Second is the casting, which I think would be impossible to get more right. As Morticia, Catherine Zeta-Jones is less chewing the scenery than ravishing it at every glance, and Luis Guzmán is playing Gomez less as a frenzied lothario and more as a man who has been so agonisingly horny for so long it has sent him stupid. Gwendoline Christie's in it being great, as ever, and it's hard to overstate how perfect a Wednesday Ortega is: unblinking, unsmiling, po-faced and odd. There are a load of teenage hunks whirring around who are in love with her, and somehow in this world it all makes sense. There is an intense and completely unnecessary scene where she plays a jet-black cello. This is the kind of thing we need to see more of on TV.

There is an intense and completely unnecessary scene where she plays a jet-black cello. This is the kind of thing we need more of

Then there's the mystery, of which there seem to be a couple: Wednesday keeps getting agonising visions of people's deaths every time she touches them, which is not ideal, gargoyles keep toppling over and fires keep roaring out of control. There's some deep unspoken history involving Gomez and Morticia, who met at the school, a monster on the loose and a crayon drawing that possibly predicts the future. In a way, Wednesday has taken the central idea of Harry Potter - what if there were a magical school that was haunted by one monster every year? - and exchanged the epic drama of Hogwarts for wry laughs. It's really, really fun.

It is also just the right level of darkly horrible: Tim Burton, Hollywood's goth-in-chief, has directed the series, and you can tell - every not-quite-in-focus severed limb, every cut-just-right off-camera scream, every piranha attack is poised to be just grim enough to be sickly enjoyable, but just kitschy enough not to be overwhelming. Every extra looks a little deliberately weird and there are a lot of grizzly scenes where people get their throats bitten out.

I think if Wednesday does the usual Netflix thing that happens to a series when it starts out good and people like it - ie runs for two seasons longer than it needs to and it becomes very clear that producers are reading fan threads on Reddit - then I'll come back and write a critical re-evaluation, but for now: Wednesday is fantastic. I cannot wait to see what weird goth direction all the other streaming platforms go in as a result of it.

Pick of the week
David Baddiel: Jews Don't Count
Monday, 9pm, Channel 4

"If we controlled things, wouldn't we have better PR?" Sarah Silverman joins David Schwimmer and Miriam Margolyes to speak with David Baddiel about modern-day antisemitism in this excellent documentary. He asks why the progressive left don't see it as a form of discrimination, using examples such as Whoopi Goldberg claiming the Holocaust wasn't about race and Labour MP Dawn Porter's failure to mention Jewish people when reading out an exhaustive list of oppressed groups. Baddiel is passionate but balanced as he delves into more contentious issues, and he also meets Jason Lee to apologise for adopting "black face" to impersonate the footballer in the 90s. Hollie Richardson

Saturday

Pick of the day
Señorita 89
9pm, BBC Four
"Ninety days in paradise in exchange for a throne sounded like a fairytale ... but it turned out to be a prison for us all." The world of beauty pageants is much darker than tiaras, tantrums and tears in this eight-part subtitled drama about the Miss Mexico pageant in 1989. We see just how grim things are from the get-go. After three months of being groomed as beauty queens, 32 women - ordered to put on their best smiles - attend a party ahead of the grand final, which is suddenly cut short by a tragic event. HR

Michael McIntyre's The Wheel
6.45pm, BBC One
The nausea-inducing merry-go-round that is The Wheel continues. Tonight's celebrity rotation: Olympic boxing champion Nicola Adams regurgitating her sporting knowledge alongside 90s aficionado Denise Van Outen. And Dermot O'Leary's chosen subject? Fish, of course. Danielle De Wolfe

Strictly Come Dancing: Blackpool Special
7.45pm, BBC One
The big week is here! No, not the final - the couples are heading to Blackpool Tower Ballroom. Alas, there will be no Tony and Katya, after they withdrew due to injury. The losing pair will be voted off in tomorrow night's results show, where Eurovision runner-up Sam Ryder will also be performing. HR

Señorita 89, Sat

Ghosts US, Sun

Castle Howard: Through the Seasons
8.10pm, Channel 4
Tonight, the castle's delightful but potentially corrosive house martin infestation is yet another reason to try to increase revenue at the North Yorkshire pile. Also, the summer heat means crop grades are in question and the annual triathlon is a tester. But one seasonal tradition abides: Christmas bookings are now open. Jack Seale

I'm a Celebrity Get Me Out of Here!
9.10pm, ITV1
There's a godawful stink coming from the bush, at the time of writing, and it's not the dunny Boy George so spiritually enjoys emptying. Perhaps by tonight's show, the nausea induced by Matt Hancock's inclusion - a light entertainment-style public flogging by tickling stick - will have abated after an eviction? Ali Catterall

Tokyo Vice, Tue

The Jonathan Ross Show
10.10pm, ITV1
Taking a break from making love (he's been at it since Wednesday), Craig David is in the studio with Wossy tonight. They're joined by comedian Katherine Ryan and Mercury prize nominees Wet Leg, who will provide live music. HR

Sunday

Pick of the day
Ghosts US
8.30pm, BBC Three
US adaptations of UK comedies are hit or miss - and the jury is still out on this latest one. The format remains the same: Samantha and Jay inherit a dead aunt's house teeming with a motley crew of ghosts. After a near-death experience, Samantha can see and speak to them. US versions of the original gang are here - with the additions of Flower the (annoying) 70s hippy and Thorfinn the Viking. It might just lack the charms of Jim Howick and Lolly Adefope. HR

BBC Young Jazz Musician 2022: Final
8pm, BBC Four
DJ Jamz Supernova is your host for the celebration of young musicians from the Southbank Centre's Queen Elizabeth Hall. The twentysomethings up for the prize - and performing a set with Nikki Yeoh's Infinitum - are pianists Luke Bacchus and Nick Manz, double bassist Ewan Hastie, guitarist Ralph Porrett and saxophonist Emma Rawicz-Szczerbo. Hannah Verdier

Kingdom of Dreams
8pm, Sky Documentaries
The final part of this sumptuous series explores the pressures placed on fashion "princes" Alexander McQueen and Marc Jacobs as their careers went stratospheric in the 00s. It unpicks what journalist Dana Thomas calls the "sad, dirty side" of the industry: egos, addiction and enormous carbon footprints. Katie Rosseinsky

SAS Rogue Heroes
9pm, BBC One
The chaps prepare for another bash at that blasted Axis airstrip, as Connor Swindells and Jack O'Connell continue to keep dramatic operations on track with their juicy charisma clash as suave Stirling and wild Paddy. It's bullish derring-do with just about enough grit and wit. JS

The Handmaid's Tale
9pm, Channel 4
There's a different jeopardy at play in this season, as the escaped June (Elisabeth Moss) reckons with her capacity for extreme violence - and her loved ones fear the extent of her capabilities. As the tension between family and the wider cause increases, June and Luke (O-T Fagbenle) embark on a hazardous new mission. JS

Italia 90: Four Weeks That Changed the World
9pm, Sky Documentaries
The second part of this series about the 1990 Fifa World Cup focuses on Yugoslavia's ascent to the quarter-finals where they faced Argentina, with Paul Gascoigne and Jürgen Klinsmann appearing as talking (and walking) heads. Beautifully shot, emotionally resonant and filled with wonderful archive footage, this isn't just for fans. Sammy Gecsoyler

Monday

Pick of the day
The White Lotus
9pm, Sky Atlantic
It's the morning after the night before - will naughty boys Cameron and Ethan be caught out? Meanwhile, Tanya and Portia are invited to party in exquisite style with their new fabulous friends. Jealous of Portia's Essex boy squeeze, Albie befriends Lucia - the woman whom his father has been paying for sex. It's all fun, fun, fun in paradise. HR

University Challenge
8.30pm, BBC Two
The penultimate first-round grudge match is upon us. Vying to be the ultimate academic quizzing force, Newnham College, Cambridge, finds itself pitted against the Courtauld Institute of Art. But will the oldest college run by women, for women, claim victory over London's creative behemoth? DDW

The Pact
9pm, BBC One
This Welsh noir has slightly run out of steam in its second series. But with the endgame approaching, the drama goes up a notch. Rakie Ayola's Christine is forced into a stream of lies but is about to be overtaken by events. Meanwhile, it's all gone haywire for the Rees clan who are at each other's throats after a rash move from Jamie. Phil Harrison

Hong Kong's Fight for Freedom
9pm, BBC Two
The second half of a documentary about the pro-democracy protests in Hong Kong in 2019 has some really startling sequences, notably a battle between police using tear gas and students wielding bows and catapults. The picture of a society divided, often but not entirely on generational lines, is fascinating. JS

Royal Mob
9pm, Sky History
The drama-doc hybrid that recaps the history of European royals via thrifty vignettes and talking heads continues by examining the end of the 19th century and poor old Queen Vic. That means the ascension of King Edward VII to the throne, who schmoozes his way across the continent while his irked nephew, Kaiser Wilhelm II, fumes. Graeme Virtue

Tuesday

Pick of the day
Tokyo Vice
9.10pm, BBC One
"There is no murder in Japan," says a police officer. "Unless you have to deal with a witness, it's never murder." Welcome to this stylish, gritty and full-throttle adaptation of Jake Adelstein's memoir about the country's 90s underworld. From the off, we know that Adelstein (Ansel Elgort) ends up in deep water. But first we learn about his beginnings as the only American journalist on the crime desk of Japan's biggest newspaper. HR

Between the Covers
7pm, BBC Two
In the reading corner tonight are "geriatric big head" Jenny Eclair, pint-pulling podcaster Al Murray, actor/author Paterson Joseph and marathon runner (and newsreader) Sophie Raworth. They'll be reading Sometimes People Die by Simon Stephenson and The Long Song by Andrea Levy. HR

Louis Theroux Interviews ... Katherine Ryan
9pm, BBC Two
"I was always odd," admits Katherine Ryan. It's the same take-it-or-leave-it attitude that permeates both the Canadian's standup sets and tonight's frank interview. Talk turns to single parenthood, before she and Theroux venture to Southend-on-Sea for a taste of her live show. DDW

Upright
9pm, Sky Comedy
Written by and starring Tim Minchin, the Aussie drama returns after a three-year hiatus with a double bill. Lucky (Minchin) is now a successful musician, though his personal life is on the rocks. Meg (House of the Dragon's Milly Alcock) crashes back into his life seeking his help to find her mum. SG

Green Lions: Cameroon '90
9.30pm, BBC Four
From Benjamin Massing's brutal challenge on Claudio Cannigia to Roger Milla dancing by the corner flag, some of Italia 90's greatest moments surrounded Cameroon's run to the quarter-finals. This atmospheric documentary explores one of sport's greatest ever underdog stories as a group of gifted amateurs forced the world to take African football seriously. PH

You Won't Believe This
10pm, Channel 4
Host Ellie Taylor brings just the right amount of incredulity to this endearingly silly new show, which plays out like a civilian Would I Lie to You? with a dash of Line of Duty. Four "suspects" share their tall tales before being grilled by ex-cops in a glass box interrogation room. It's up to the contestants to work out who's telling the truth. KR

Wednesday

Pick of the day
The Ice Cream Wars
9pm, BBC Two
Why did ice-cream vans become such a contentious commodity in Glasgow's housing schemes during the 80s? And what role did they play in a flat fire that, at the time, caused the biggest mass murder in Scottish history? Speaking to police officers, former ice-cream business owners and reporters, this hard-going two-parter investigates. HR

Location, Location, Location
8pm, Channel 4
Vow factor: planning a wedding is stressful enough without trying to buy your first home at the same time. Tonight's pair of engaged couples may have expert help but even the mighty Kirstie and Phil find it tough going in south Manchester's runaway housing market. A guinea pig with an enviable two-floor property lightens the mood. GV

Grand Designs: House of the Year
9pm, Channel 4
"Oh my word, how phenomenal!" That exclamation can only mean one thing: Kevin McCloud is looking round the year's greatest gaffs. In the second escapist instalment, it's homes that have gone through big transformations, from a London mews house with an eco upgrade to a Dutch barn renovation in Sussex. HV

MasterChef: The Professionals
9.10pm, BBC One
The final round of heats sees the four chefs under pressure with a skills test from Marcus Wareing. Can they fillet a sea bream to perfection and whip up an Asian-style broth and rice? Later, Anna Haugh orders beetroot tortellini with a goat's cheese and walnut filling. Sadly, the two weakest chefs will be sent home. HV

Two Doors Down
10pm, BBC Two
Tonight's episode of the Scottish comedy shows there is such a thing as being too much of an eager beaver. Excitement is in the air as Colin introduces the neighbours to his new girlfriend, Anne Marie. Things take a turn when the gang are shaken by her enthusiastic approach to the dinner party. SG

Outsiders
10pm, Dave
David Mitchell's comedy bootcamp sees some surprise visitors make an appearance. Funny bones aren't the only things being tested; so too are the comedian's musical chops. Darren Harriott and Maisie Adam come up with a new martial art while Fatiha El-Ghorri uses her spelling "skills" to distract the kids from Phil Wang's surname. SG

Thursday

Pick of the day
Live at the Moth Club
10pm, Dave
Penned by its creators - Alex Owen and Ben Ashenden - as "a real-life Muppet Show", this comedy showcase captures life on and off stage in east London's Moth Club. Performing a mix of standup and sketches, the cast of funny people featured tonight include Kemah Bob, Jamie Demetriou (as the club's "city boy" punter), Phil Wang (with a set written by the tech assistant), and Natasia Demetriou and Ellie White (as hipster PRs). SG

The Secret Genius of Modern Life
8pm, BBC Two
"There is way too much information contained in the recording of a human voice - as anyone who has ever received one of my seven-minute-long voice notes will testify." The endlessly enthusiastic Prof Hannah Fry's investigation into how Alexa devices talk is just one fascinating part of this deep dive into virtual assistants, which almost half of all UK homes now have. HR

Live at the Moth Club, Thu

The English
9pm, BBC One
Despite hardly being able to see what's going on because the set seems to be lit by candles, Hugo Blick's tense western continues to bring the high drama. After parting ways with Eli to try to return the children they found, Lady Cornelia heads back to the farm - but they both face perils before reuniting. HR

Taskmaster
9pm, Channel 4
It's penultimate episode time, which means ramped-up levels of ludicrousness for our knights - and Dara Ó Briain's slender lead means he's in the running for the ultimate prize: Greg Davies's little golden head. Meanwhile, John Kearns waggles his sausage and Sarah Millican finds a unique use for a table tennis ball. AC

Brian Cox: How the Other Half Live
9pm, Channel 5
The concluding part of this exploration of wealth and inequality sees the Succession actor taking his straight-talking ways to the US. He meets an influencer in Miami, homeless people in Harlem and the heir to a media dynasty. Knowing what it's like to have no money gives Cox a balance of empathy and rage. HV

Live at the Apollo
9.55pm, BBC Two
Proving to be this week's most ubiquitous telly comedian, Strictly's Ellie Taylor takes the stage tonight, alongside moustachioed Aussie comedian Sam Simmons. Gina Yashere will be taking the comedy reins for the evening. HR

Friday

Pick of the day
Agatha Christie: Lucy Worsley on the Mystery Queen
9pm, BBC Two
"Agatha Christie's childhood is haunted by a sinister phantom - a gunman, an imaginary figure stalking her dreams and her home ... evil is an ever-lurking presence." Oof, Lucy Worsley sure knows how to rope you in with a great historical tale. In this three-part series, she brings her recent biography of the enigmatic and elusive queen of crime books to the screen, through dramatisation, interviews with experts and an infectious passion for the writer. HR

Unreported World
7.30pm, Channel 4
For Gaza's underground artists, simply staging a play or going to the cinema can be horribly risky in the face of Hamas censorship. Reporter Jonathan Miller meets a man who is bravely determined to renovate an old cinema to its former glory - even as Gaza's cinemas are being branded "dens of pornography" and burned down. AC

The Great Game
9pm, Sky Atlantic
It's still early doors for this Italian drama about a disgraced football agent with scores to settle, but it has intrigue and bling to burn. Corso Manni (Francesco Montanari) may have the look of a stage hypnotist but he retains an enviable contacts book. Can he pull off a tricky favour for fickle striker Quintana (actual ex-footballer Jesús Mosquera Bernal)? GV

The Last Leg
10pm, Channel 4
Richard Ayoade - still busy promoting that new children's book of his - joins Adam Hills, Josh Widdicombe and Alex Brooker. Also taking down the World Cup in Qatar and the other big issues of the week: comedian Susan Wokoma. HR

The Graham Norton Show
10.40pm, BBC One
Bond, Nanny McPhee and Magneto join Graham tonight. Daniel Craig, Emma Thompson and Ian McKellen take a seat, along with Mastermind host Clive Myrie and comedian John Bishop. Charlie Puth takes to the stage to perform his hit single Loser. SG

The Big Narstie Show
11.05pm, Channel 4
Former striker Adebayo Akinfenwa is Mo Gillgan and Big Narstie's perfect guest in this big week of football. They're joined by comedian Joel Dommett, martial artist Samurider, actor Denise Van Outen and Loose Women's Brenda Edwards. HR

Wednesday

Netflix, from Wednesday

"They haven't built a school strong enough to hold me. I doubt this one will be any different." This reboot of The Addams Family from the master of the theatrically sinister, Tim Burton, focuses on the enigmatic teenage daughter Wednesday (Jenna Ortega). She's been thrown out of her regular high school after an incident with some deadly flesh-eating fish and enrolled at a performatively gothic "school for outcasts" – the alma mater of her mother Morticia (Catherine Zeta-Jones). Here, the cliques are divided into supernatural categories (vampires, werewolves etc) and Wednesday's glorious disdain for all other students will be tested to destruction. Great fun. Phil Harrison

First Love

Netflix, from Thursday

This generation-spanning love story is inspired by Japanese pop superstar Hikaru Utada's two songs First Love and Hatsukoi. They are separated by 19 years, but the screen story has an even wider narrative scope. Jumping between three decades, it takes in the first meeting of Harumichi Namiki (Takeru Satoh) and Yae Noguchi (Hikari Mitsushima), their growing attraction and their separation. But as the two protagonists wallow in their memories, might redemption be possible? Can their love be rekindled? It's tasteful, idealised and at times, a little antiseptic: romance as designed by Marie Kondo. PH

Our Universe

Netflix, from Tuesday

Paging Morgan Freeman! Netflix has an uplifting, beautifully shot new series about life, the universe and pretty much everything – all it needs is a narrator. Freeman, of course, rises to the occasion, lending his impossibly grave and sonorous tones to this epic, frequently eye-popping series. The emphasis here is on connections: from the stars to the oceans and the big bang to the tiniest plant growing in the desert, what irresistible forces and processes link all life on Earth? It's undeniably spectacular and admirably ambitious stuff. PH

Blood, Sex & Royalty

Netflix, from Wednesday

The streamer has clearly decided that royal-based semi-fiction is the way to go: hot on the heels of season five of The Crown comes this racy docudrama based on the scurrilous but arguably proto-feminist life of Anne Boleyn. The dramatic segments are led by Amy James-Kelly's Anne, but there are slightly awkward inserts involving historians offering thoughts on the context of the fictionalised action. It might have worked better as a basic drama – as it is, the show struggles to gather momentum as either history or entertainment. PH

Echo 3

Apple TV+, from Wednesday

Implausible feats of vigilante guerrilla warfare in this thriller starring Jessica Ann Collins as Amber Chesborough, an American scientist who has been captured in the middle of a bloody conflict on the Colombia-Venezuela border. It falls to her husband Prince (Michiel Huisman) and her misleadingly named brother Bambi (Luke Evans) to save her. Fortunately, the pair are former special forces soldiers. Echo 3 is the creation of Zero Dark Thirty writer Mark Boal and the tone (underground political intrigue meets sweaty ultraviolence) is comparable. PH

Staged

BritBox, from Thursday

Proving to be more than a simple but joyous one-hit lockdown wonder, David Tennant and Michael Sheen's snappy series – in which they play themselves – returns for a third season. Still directed and written by Simon Evans (who also stars), the newest collection of 15-minute shorts sees real-life pals David and Michael return to normal life. Simon – whose work schedule needs filling – pitches a Christmas radio drama to the pair. The only problem is that they've made it clear they no longer want anything to do with him ... Hollie Richardson

The Confession

Prime Video, from Friday

This two-part crime documentary possesses all the twists and turns of a melodrama but, sadly, is both true and, to this day, unresolved. Patricia Hall went missing from her home in Pudsey, West Yorkshire in 1992. Her husband, Keith, was immediately a suspect and the subject of a controversial honey trap that led to a game of cat and mouse with the police. But still, no evidence tied him to the crime. So what really happened to Patricia? The programme hears from Keith Hall, Patricia's sister Christine and other key protagonists as they process this ongoing tragedy. PH

Inclusivity is baked in, and Oti gets political back home

The Great British Bake Off Final
Channel 4/All 4

The 2022 series of the baking contest has been denounced for being unprecedentedly mean. And there is a moment here where Prue snaps over Syabira having such a fetish for tarragon that she even puts some in her blackberry butter cream. "You can't taste it," says Prue. "Frankly, I'm glad because it's delicious." If that's unkindness, let unkindness reign unchecked. More striking is the fact that the three finalists are immigrants: Abdul is Pakistani, Syabira made a first-week cake in the form of her native Malaysian home, while Sandro was born in Angola. Bake Off has long been a proving ground for a kinder, more diverse and inclusive Britain, and by the end of this final its big-hearted drama has served as a proud champion of immigration's beauty. Stuart Jeffries

Oti Mabuse: My South Africa
BBC One/iPlayer

This celebrity travelogue follows the ex-Strictly dancer as she returns to her roots. We see the tiny house where she lived as a child and the stall where she sold flowers to earn money for dance contests. But as the film widens out to make South Africa its subject, we get strange results. At an ostrich farm run by a nice white couple, Mabuse mentions the campaign to return property stolen under apartheid. A celebratory sequence where Mabuse joins in with a social media dance craze is followed by a solemn trip to see Nelson Mandela's cell on Robben Island, and My South Africa starts to embody something. We see how television, with its ability to butt high- and low-brow up against each other and its knack for presenting one thing disguised as another, can educate like no other medium. Jack Seale

Tulsa King
Paramount+

I hate it when you spend 25 years in prison keeping shtum for your New York mafia family and on your release they exile you to Oklahoma with some nonsense about it being virgin mob territory and yours for the taking, instead of reinstating you as the capo dei capi's righthand man. That, alas, is 75-year-old Dwight's situation at the beginning of 76-year-old Stallone's first television venture. Only one episode was made available for review, which is enough to say that its retro energy (move slowly and break things) and simple moral philosophy (move slowly and break bits of people who are worse than you) is great fun. It knows exactly what it has to work with and doesn't threaten to frighten anyone with innovative tricks or boundary pushing. Lucy Mangan

1899
Netflix

This new show from the creators of hit German sci-fi show Dark is a horror-mystery puzzle box with a sci-fi edge. The setting is a steamship crossing the Atlantic which is sinisterly named the Cerberus, after the many-headed monstrous dog that was said to guard Hades. To make matters more ominous, four months earlier a ship on the same voyage, the Prometheus, vanished without trace. Soon, the two ships meet … There's travel through time and space, secret portals, creepy children and a light sprinkling of pro-immigration politics, but the pacing is ultimately more confounding than the sci-fi. Episodes range from languid to gruelling, crawling towards the next plot point with an agonising level of restraint. It's unlikely to capture imaginations. Leila Latif

Pick of the week

The Evaporated
Widely available, episodes weekly from Monday
Jake Adelstein is one hell of a storyteller: TV drama Tokyo Vice (starting on BBC One this week) is based on the memoir about his time working as an American journalist reporting on Japan's criminal underworld in the 90s. He continues to compel in this new series, which investigates the mysteries surrounding the 80,000 people reported missing in Japan every year, staring with the disappearance of his own accountant. Hollie Richardson

Come As You Are
Widely available, episodes weekly
Emily Nagoski knows a lot about the science of sex and she's not afraid to share it. But it's not all about the data; she's keen to spread confidence, joy and pleasure, which is where this podcast begins. Why should you separate pleasure from sex? How can it make you feel alive? And what's a "choregasm"? Hannah Verdier

Noble Champions
Spotify, episodes weekly
Santigold's (pictured right) "modern day salon" welcomes guests including Questlove, Mos Def and Idris Elba. Much is covered in the free-flowing chats, from the commodification of art, spirituality and the definition of Black music to forgetting to pick the kids up from school. Santigold is a warm and smart interviewer and is always happy to let her guests spill. HV

Gloriously Unready
Widely available, all episodes out now
Counsellor Josephine Hughes found herself "gloriously unready"

when both her daughters came out as transgender, unbeknown to each other. Hughes is brutally honest and endlessly wise as she tells their story, outlining the moments that many parents face with so much love and support that she can't fail to help others in the same situation. HV

The Emerald Triangle
Widely available, episodes weekly
Crooked City's new podcast drops listeners right in the middle of the action with a man who finds his friend's body in the Emerald Triangle, northern California's marijuana-rich, hippy oasis. Journalist Sam Anderson hits the trail in true-crime podcast style to find that one of his schoolmates is accused of the murder. HV

Radio

Qatar and the Fall of Fifa
Sat, 7.05pm, BBC World Service
Today's documentary delves into accusations of Qatar's World Cup vote-buying and manipulation - and how this prodigiously wealthy yet entirely unsuitable location came to hold the world's most-watched sporting event. Guided by World Service correspondent Alex Capstick, we journey through claims of corruption and their subsequent exposure by FBI agents in Zurich, culminating in an exclusive interview with disgraced former Fifa president Sepp Blatter. Danielle De Wolfe

Bad Blood: The Story of Eugenics
Mon, 4.30pm, Radio 4
"A lot of it's in the genes, don't you believe? You have good genes in Minnesota!" So said Donald Trump to a roaring crowd in a campaign rally in 2020 - which Business Insider compared to the Nazi obsession with a "master race". In this fascinating new series, geneticist Adam Rutherford presents the story of eugenics, and the part it has played in history, starting in Victorian England. Hollie Richardson

Hennikay
Tue, 6.30pm, Radio 4
David Spicer's quirky story stars Bill Bailey (pictured above) as Guy, a middle-aged man who finds himself revisited by his imaginary childhood friend Hennikay (Max Pattison) at a stressful moment in his life. In a nightmarish turn of events, he's been ordered to go on a team-bonding paintballing day with work colleagues. But could there be an upside to this? Under the influence of Hennikay, Guy becomes unusually creative. A nice comic conceit, and an interesting meditation on listening to your instincts and acknowledging your inner child. Phil Harrison

Gossip and Goddesses With Granny Kumar
Wed, 6.30pm, Radio 4
Back to Wembley for a second series of the comedy chatshow hosted by the unstoppably nosy Granny Kumar (Meera Syal), who interviews inspirational celebrities for the benefit of her suburban community group. The blend of scripted gags and off-the-cuff banter requires up-for-it guests to really work - and Ackley Bridge's Sunetra Sarker and BBC Breakfast's Naga Munchetty clearly understand the assignment. Graeme Virtue

Pick of the week

Aisha

Saturday, 12.45pm, 8pm, Sky Cinema Premiere

Letitia Wright is currently the focus of attention due to her central role in Marvel's action behemoth Black Panther: Wakanda Forever. Her delicate performance in Frank Berry's social realist drama, however, finds the same gravitas in the quotidian and intimate. Aisha (Wright) is a Nigerian asylum seeker who has been in Ireland a year pending a decision on her case. The limbo she's in has led her to bury trauma, and the strain is starting to show. A tentative connection with security guard Conor (Josh O'Connor) is a release, but the system she's caught up in militates against commitment – or hope. A film Ken Loach would be proud of, Aisha is forceful and moving. Simon Wardell

The Ghost of Richard Harris

Saturday, 9pm, Sky Arts

The Irish actor casts a long shadow, hence the title of Adrian Sibley's insightful documentary profile. It's obvious in the reminiscences by his three sons (all in the business: two actors and a director) as they pick through his possessions or, in Jared's case, stay in the Savoy hotel suite Richard kept for 28 years. A fascinating character – "hellraiser" is the description most often used here by those who knew him – Harris came to fame in the angry young men crowd, made it big in Hollywood and became an unlikely pop star. A life lived to excess, but with few regrets. SW

Surge

Sunday, 10pm, BBC Two

Ben Whishaw gives a mesmerising performance in this relentless close-up drama about an airport security officer going off the rails. Friendless, joyless and withdrawn, Joseph snaps one day at work and has what appears to be a manic episode – beginning with chewing a glass and descending swiftly into bank robbery. From coiled and cowed to giddy and impetuous, a brilliant Whishaw runs the gamut of emotions in a debut feature by Oscar short film winner Aneil Karia that puts us right up in Joseph's face as his sense of identity is smashed up and rearranged. SW

Diego Maradona

Sunday, 12.10am, More4

Yet more football-related content linked to the World Cup, but this has the stamp of quality as it's by Asif Kapadia, the director of those fine documentary profiles Senna and Amy. Facing a life of more incident than most to cover, Kapadia focuses largely on the Argentinian's time playing for the looked-down-upon Napoli, whom he helped win their first ever league title and then went on to lift the World Cup. With a wealth of unseen footage, it's a fascinating cautionary tale of a man hitting the heights and plunging to the depths, sometimes simultaneously. SW

Les Misérables

Wednesday, 11.55pm, Film4

Echoes of La Haine – and, more obliquely, Victor Hugo's novel – abound in this Cannes prize winner from Ladj Ly, a tense 2019 crime drama inspired by the 2005 Paris riots. In a poor suburb, cop Stéphane (Damien Bonnard) joins a crime street unit, aimless kids are tugged between faith and mischief, and the theft of a lion cub by rebellious teenager Issa (Issa Perica) lights the fuse on anti-police resentments. In Ly's nuanced, authentic debut feature, everyone has their reasons. SW

Good Night Oppy

Wednesday, Prime Video

Like a particularly glossy edition of Horizon, Ryan White's engaging space documentary tells the story of the 2004 Mars exploration rovers, Spirit and Opportunity (AKA Oppy). They were designed to last 90 days but, in Oppy's case, survived for 15 years. It talks to the Nasa team who built them, blasted them off to the red planet then tended to them as they pootled around digging in craters, withstanding dust storms and malfunctioning. With the robots' anthropomorphic features and their creators' increasingly emotional attitude towards them, WALL-E and R2-D2 spring to mind. SW

Meet Cute

Friday, Prime Video

Alex Lehmann's new film is less of a romcom and more of a romdram, as Kaley Cuoco's suicidal Sheila uses a time machine to relive her perfect first date with Gary (Saturday Night Live's Pete Davidson in straight-man mode) and stave off her despair. There are notes of Before Sunrise and It's a Wonderful Life as the story shifts uneasily between black comedy and sadness. But you should really watch this for the immensely likable Cuoco – on a roll after The Flight Attendant – who brings a zesty, slightly acidic humour and chippy vulnerability to her character. SW
